Tech Works Announces Vandal-Proof Nurse Call Solutions for High-Security Environments

Henderson, NV (August 6, 2018) Tech Works, a leader in specialized communication systems, announces its new line of vandal-proof healthcare solutions that are designed to limit downtime due to system vandalism or abuse.

These rugged and specialized solutions are made to meet nurse call needs in psychiatric and mental areas of acute-care hospitals, psychiatric clinics, mental health institutions, and prison/detention facilities. These new solutions improve staff and patient safety as well as prevent employees in high-security environments from having to deal with potential system malfunction caused by damage.

"We are in constant contact with our dealers about marketplace needs for both healthcare and detention," says Mark Dundas, CEO, Tech Works. "They spoke, and we listened. Based on their insight, we are excited to launch this new suite of vandal-proof solutions."

"This caliber of vandal proof nurse call solutions will be a perfect fit for the specialized needs of our hospital and clinic clients," said Jeff Ritholtz, sales and project management, United Medical Communications Corp. "These niche products are simple and easy to use with a perfect application for psychiatric, correctional or other areas that need durable solutions."

"Our detention clients have been waiting for a durable and simple nurse call solution like this," says Bryan Hodges, Vice President, IcoTech. "The system's price point and features are just what the detention market needs."

In addition to durability, this line of nurse call solutions makes staff jobs easier and allows them to select preferred notification and call methods. Staff can ask for back-up in an emergency and create customized, integrated management reports to keep up with compliance requirements.
